Opinions of the Chicago Press.

Oricago, March 8.—The press opinions on the Cabind chosen by President Hayes are generally favorable. The Inter-Ocean, while doubting the feasibility of retaining Schurz, acknowledges has great ability, favors allowing the President to call about him his own advisers, and deprecates the action of the Senate yesterday. Sherman, Thompson, McCrary, and perhaps Dovens, stand for the more pronounced element of Republicanism. Schurz and Key represent the liberal and conservative element, and Evarts occupies half-way ground. It is not a body promising great unanimity of thought, but has pienty of brains, and ought to be tried until the President, at least, is satisfied that he has committed an error in the assembling of antagonistic views as his confidential advisers.

The Times says that in these selections the President has given the country the first distinct indication that he intends to go back on the dismnable policy of the Grant regime, relegating the Mostons, Blaines, Chandlers, and Camerons to the rear, and bringing forward the liberal, independent element. Ties means music-a smash-up of old combinations that will benefit the country. The Times is satisfied with the

The Fribune says this Cabinet will give general satisfaction to the country at large, and is worthier than Grant's eight years ago. Its composition bests the President's firm intention to carry out the conservative and conciliatory policy. Any opposition to Schurz's confirmation will be personal, and the Tribune asserts that he is an abler, wiser, and honester man than any who will oppose him. Any opposition to Key on part of the Democrats will be, to a certain extent, notice that the southern people are not inclined to meet President Hayes's disposition towards them in a proper spirit, and they will be the sufferers. THE PHONETIC SETHOD AN IMPROVEis the fact; Liverpool is only a town. LOED." - " HLLOWED " VS. "HA-The English Solal Science Association held a meeting to discuss spelling "Reform." The London Daiy Telegraph reports: The chair was taken by Dr. Rigg, who opened the proceedings in a somewhat hopeless manner by observing that "he had given in his adhesion to the necessity of doing something toward the reform of our existing national system of spelling, but that what was to be done he did not exactly knew." The speakers who followed him did very little to remove this initial difficulty. One gentleman suggested that instead of twenty-six letters we ought to have an alphabet of one hundred and twenty, and that all capitals ought to be abolished. He seems to have illustrated his views by a set of diagrams drawn with a piece of chalk on a blackboard; but the audience was far from enthusiastic, and somewhat dead. The next speaker wanted like to marry. Applicants, however, must the proposats, ingenious as they were, fell to see the phonetic system introduced. He rendered the Lord's Prayer phonetically to the following effect: "Our Father which art in heven, haloed be Thy name, Thy kingdom cum, Thy will be dun in erth az it iz in heven, giv us this day our daily bred, and forgiv us our dets az we forgiv our detorz. And leed us not intu temtaishon, but deliver us from eevil." And he expressed himself as of opinion that if this peculiar mode of orthography were only adopted the ordinary labor of education would be diminished by something like eighty per cent.

It is idle to reason with gentlemen who want to spell "hallowed" "haloed," and assure us that we gain by doing so. The advocates of phonetic spelling are like the anti-vaccinators, the believers in spiritrappings, and the gentlemen who are convinced that the earth is flat-persons with whom to argue seriously is to waste valuable time. When a man gravely tells us that he approves of such a monstrous spelling as "piktchur," on the ground that it is part of the general system of spelling reform, it is impossible to answer bim by argument. "Piktchur" is quite as difficult a word to spell and to bear in the memory as "picture," while it further labors under this disadvantage-that it does not preserve the etymology or show its derivation from the Latin pingere. The changes and corruptions of the English language have been so many that words which are essentially distinct both in origin and meaning have come to be cratic), speaking of the new Cabinet, double-leads the fellowing: In the conflict and the phoneticists, by confounding the which the blood-thirsty Radical leaders have spelling, would confound the words as well, ern policy the Democratic senators cannot afford to discuss what should be their position. They should unhesitatingly give all netic principles, we should spell all of them should confuse four words which are essentially distinct, both in significance and source. "Write" is Anglo-Saxon, "Rite" President doubtless expected and allowed is Latin, "Right" is also Latin, and is the President doubtless expected and allowed for the discontent and opposition which the appointment of Schurz, Evarts, and Key we find it in "shipwright," wheelwright," we find it in "shipwright," wheelwright," and other such combinations, is connected with "work," and has nothing to do with either "rectus" or "rite." All these distinctions the friends of phoneticism would abolish at one fell swoop. They would ignore the distinction be-tween "bow" and "bough," and between "wheel" and "weal"; and they would spell "theatre" "phaeton," and "pheasant" in a manner which would suggest that all three words were derived from the same common source. When you tell them that if their reform were carried out the greater portion of the history of the world would be destroyed, their only answer is that the history of the world must take care of itself. They are cheerfully prepared to spell "Dacre" as "Dakur," "Cholmondeley" as "Chumly," "St. John" as riety he acquired by certain charges of mal-practice which from time to time have been cester" as "Sissitur," "Greenwich" as brought against him, committed suicide "Grinidge," "boatswain" as "bosun," handled, four-bladed pocket-knife, of fine difficult and inconsistent. This, unfortusuggestion that we should put an end to all debated points in history by burning every Koran or what is not. On the latter supposition they are erroneous and superfluwhether the abolition of our existing sysafter the wound was inflicted death ensued. in reality to learn history and etymology Mrs. Pennington was down stairs at the while ostensibly he is only learning to spell. On the other hand, it is, from his own point and whatever ground the friends of phoneticism may set up they can hardly claim our sympathies when they ask us to abridge the mental exertions of the British schoolboy at the expense of that one eternal record of English history which stands preserved in the English language. Those who believe that women have no from the London World, and then see if they are not converted: A young lady with whom I have the pleasure to be acquainted asked me the other day what nation I considered to be of the most importance to my young friend to be of a sensible turn of gentlemen in Parliament assembled and my fellow-countrymen assembled—that I did not know; and having made my confession awaited the information curiously.
